(Cite as: 242 B.R. 759)

An attorney for a Chapter 13 debtor submitted a fee application, seeking a fees of $5,129.83 and reimbursement of expenses in the amount of $75.00. The Court held that: (1) based upon consideration of the twelve factors established in Johnson, a reasonable amount of time expended in this case should have been no more than 12.5 hours and that a reasonable hourly rate should have been no more than $250, and (2) attorney could only be reimbursed for expenses actually incurred. Thus, the total compensation allowed to the applicant was $3,125 and reimbursement of actual costs in the amount of 27.40.
